FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

GOLIB.TV Announces the official release of its' new streaming service

SAN DIEGO, CA – GOLIB.TV announced today the worldwide release of its' hosted online streaming service that streams the newest premium movies, audio-books, and music titles. Based upon our knowledge GOLIB.TV is currently the only service that offer the newest premium movie releases for library consumption. GOLIB.TV is also among the first to offer an annual fixed-subscription model for movie streaming of premium movie titles. The official launch date for the GOLIB.TV streaming service is January 1, 2017.

Consumers have been asking for a streaming service with more flexible choices, and we've responded by introducing GOLIB.TV which addresses the need of small, mid-size, and large libraries. Throughout our company we have strived to give our customers the best possible experience.

For large libraries with up to a million or more patrons and where it is generally not feasible to adopt a Pay-Per-Use model for movies streaming, we offer a fixed annual subscription service for movie streaming.

For small to mid-sized libraries that may need an offering that will prevent them from over-running their budget, we offer a Pay-Per-Use (PPU) option for premium movie streaming that provide for a minimum cost to adopt with a pay-as-you-go model.

For further flexibility the GOLIB.TV service provides for the option for customers to choose to adopt either our movies, audio-books, or music service or all three.

GOLIB.TV is currently in works on a web API which will open up the inner working of our streaming service for easy integration with third-party systems.

Whether it is streaming movies, audio-books or music, customers want a service that is high-quality, flexible, and that provide apps to serve their desktop and mobile device patrons. For the first time large libraries can adopt a premium movies service on an annual subscription basis with no risk of over-running their budgets. Also for the first time libraries can adopt a streaming service that provides for streaming of the newest movie releases.
